Things To Bring

Protective Footwear - This is a must! Having the right footwear to match the season and weather conditions is equally important. You must be prepared to get your shoes wet. You should pick footwear that will offer protection, traction, support and comfort when wet (old sneakers, river sandals and/or water shoes is usually best).

Extra Layers of Clothing and Rain Gear - It is recommended you dress in layers than to not have enough protection against varying weather condition. A wind-breaker jacket can go a long way to help protect you from varying weather conditions. Nylon and poly-fibered fleece jackets are far more versatile than any cotton fabrics. They provide better protection against the elements under most weather conditions and will dry quickly.

Sun Protection - It is always best to bring sunscreen, hat and cover garments for protection from over exposure to the sun.

Sunglasses - Any sunglasses can be a big plus to counter act sun glare that can make it hard to see. Polarized glasses cut out 50% of the suns reflective rays on the surface of the water making it easier on your eyes and to see the fish action as it unfolds.

Small Cooler, Food & Beverages - You may want to pack a small cooler with your food and extra beverages. No glass bottles, please!

Camera - Don't forget to bring to capture some great photos!
